BINGO!

What You'll Need:
Ruler, paper, pen, crayons or markers

First, make your bingo cards. Use a ruler to make a grid of 16 squares on a piece of paper. (Draw three lines across, and three lines up and down.) In each square, write the name or draw the picture of something in nature: a bird, insect, animal, tree, flower, etc. They should all be things that can be found in your neighborhood. You'll need to make several cards, and make sure each card has a different arrangement and at least some different nature objects compared to other cards. When you're ready to play, get a group of friends and give a bingo card to each person. Go on a nature walk. When a player sees something that is on his or her card, the person marks off that square. The first person to mark all the squares in a row wins. Or, you can play super nature bingo: The first person to mark all the squares on a card wins.
