Horse and Rider
With only your powers of mental manipulation, can you figure out how to position the strip with the cowboys onto the square with the horses so that it looks as if the cowboys were riding the horses?

This problem (based on the classic Trick Donkeys puzzle created by Sam Loyd) looks deceptively simple, but one soon realizes that the obvious answer is wrong. If you can't solve this in your mind, try copying and cutting out the strip to experiment with paper. Hint: The solution makes the horses look much faster.
Answer
This puzzle is another that often creates a conceptual block. But, as you can see, the solution is quite simple.
