Trick20DollarBill

Background
Before the days of television, businesses used on-site attractions to build up a customer base. Searchlights would scan the evening skies and draw curious townspeople to a new store. At special events, merchants would pass out giveaways---simple toys labeled with the business name or novelties like rubber “dollar bills” that could be stretched (showing how lower prices would stretch a paycheck).

The Trick
1. Cut out one of the pattern “bills” on the next page and fold it in half.
2. Write a message on the back like “Don’t you wish! But it’s worth a laugh anyway. Your friend _______.”
3. Slip it into/under something so just enough shows: a book, the seat of a sofa...
