How a dry cell is constructed

Remove the outer covering from an old dry cell. With a saw, cut the battery in half and observe its structure. Observe the carbon or positive pole in the centre, the zinc can which is the negative pole and the material between the two poles which is the chemical that acts on the plate of the cell. Notice how the zinc has been eaten away by the chemical. Observe that the chemical materials were sealed into the zinc can with hot pitch.